FUND DESCRIPTION

The Vetiva Banking ETF "VETBANK ETF" is an open-ended Exchange Traded Fund managed by Vetiva Fund Managers Limited. The VETBANK ETF is designed to track the performance of the constituent companies of the NGX BANKING Index and to replicate the price and yield performance of the Index.

INDEX DESCRIPTION

The NGX BANKING Index comprises of the top 10 banks listed on the Nigerian Exchange Group ("NGX") in terms of market capitalization and liquidity and is a price index weighted by adjusted market capitalization.

MARKET REVIEW & OUTLOOK

The Nigerian equities market posted marginal gains in April, as the NGX All-Share Index (ASI) rose 12bps m/m to close at 105,800.85 points, translating to a 2.79% YTD gain.

The banking index extended its losing streak and posted a loss of -1.52% m/m. Although we saw a rally in WEMA (+41.12% m/m) and FIDELITY (+5.00%), the losses in stocks like FBHN (-11.72% m/m), UBA (-5.15% m/m), ETI (-2.04% m/m) and FCMB (-4.64% m/m) outweighed the gains, leading to the downward trajectory. We saw profit-taking activities during the month as investors reacted to some Q1 earnings resulting in sell pressure.

The sector's negative performance reflected investor risk aversion and portfolio rebalancing following strong Q1 gains, we also note the moderation in interest rates so far this year may be a contributor to dampened sentiment.

While short-term volatility may persist, the overall market sentiment remains cautious. Following two consecutive months of losses, the banking index could stay under pressure in May. We anticipate additional corporate filings, particularly from banks like Sterling Bank, which are yet to release their unaudited Q1 results. However, the general subdued market mood may dampen any significant upside or bargain hunting recovery in the sector. That said, the banking sector index remains up 5.33% year-to-date.
